

Maureen Vosburgh is a Connecticut native who moved to Santa Fe by way of Tucson. Her professional background has focused on sales, marketing, and fundraising. Maureen was named #1 in a Hartford commercial real estate firm, having consummated the largest sale in the history of the company, and has received awards for her community service as a Realtor in the residential market in Tucson. Also in Tucson, while serving as the Vice President of the Board of Directors for Habitat for Humanity, Maureen was persuaded to join staff as Habitat's Director of Philanthropy. The latter position included raising funds for Habitat's new headquarters building.

Volunteering has been an important part of Maureen's life since her teenage years, especially the empowerment of women, the arts, and honoring Native American peoples. In addition to her work with NMC-NMWA, she serves as Secretary of the Board of Futures For Children, which empowers Native youth through education. To augment her Board service, Maureen is looking for "just the right job" in order to feel fully engaged in her new community.

Maureen was one of the first visitors to the National Museum of Women in the Arts in Washington when it opened. Being duly impressed, she was thrilled to learn that New Mexico hosts a Committee of the Museum. "I was attracted to NMC-NMWA after attending several of the group's monthly meetings," says Maureen. "Not only have they introduced me to the arts in New Mexico, but I have met many like-minded women who believe wholeheartedly in the support of women artists." Maureen's daughter is an artist teaching in San Francisco, further underscoring her desire to support women artists.

Maureen attended Hollins College in Virginia and the Sorbonne in Paris and is attempting to regain her fluency in French. She has two feline friends, Daphne and Luna, both foundlings.
